"A powerful look at how to eliminate, from within cultures themselves, a tragic practice. This procedure is perpetrated on young girls, the most vulnerable members of society."

Meryl Streep
Actress

"Stunningly honest, soberingly frank...An unparalleled window into the 'business of FGM'—of the cultural and economic pressures brought to bear on the girls who are cut, and the cutters themselves. And yet, woven throughout is the hope and a vision of a world free from FGM."

Tamera Gugelmeyer
Executive Dir.,
The Sisterhood
is Global Institute

"Reveals a sense of hope, demonstrating that FGM is not an acceptable cultural practice, and that a people, culture, religion or nation cannot and will not allow themselves to be defined by pain, cruelty, and destruction."

Kate Schaab
Asst. Dir.,
Women's Resource Center,
Northern Illinois University

Every day, 6,000 girls from the Horn of Africa to sub-Saharan nations are subjected to female genital mutilation (FGM). With fierce determination and deep love for their communities, brave African activists are leading a formidable, fearless grassroots movement to end 5,000 years of FGM. An insightful look at the frontlines of a quiet revolution taking the continent by storm, this extraordinarily powerful film is one of the first to focus on African solutions to FGM.

Beautifully directed by Emmy Award® winner Paula Heredia and produced by Equality Now, Africa Rising travels through remote villages in Burkina Faso, Kenya, Mali, Somalia and Tanzania. Weaving together dynamic footage and the poignant stories of girls personally affected by FGM, it shows how African women and men are putting an end to this human rights violation. Convincing circumcisers to lay down their knives, engaging the police to implement the law, and honing leadership skills in girls, these determined activists have been working tirelessly for years to conceptualize their campaign. Africa Rising paints an intimate portrait of the broadly-based but little-known anti-FGM movement and shows that courageous, creative and resourceful individuals can change the course of history.

"Eye-opening...Examines both sides of the issue without judgment or condescension by letting those closest to the subject matter do the talking."

New York Magazine

"Very moving...Sure to generate dialogue and debate both on FGM and current immigration policy. A must-have documentary relevant for a range of disciplines and classes."

Beverly A. Mcphail, Ph.D.
Dir.,
Women's Resource Center,
University of Houston

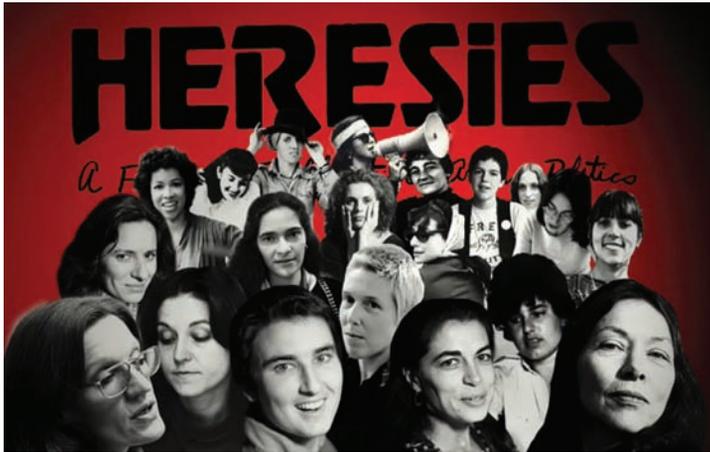

Mrs. Goundo is fighting to remain in the United States. But it's not just because of the ethnic conflict and drought that has plagued her native Mali. Threatened with deportation, her two-year-old daughter could be forced to undergo female genital mutilation (FGM), like 85 percent of women and girls in Mali. Using rarely cited grounds for political asylum, Goundo must convince an immigration judge that her daughter is in danger.

Sensitive and moving, this important film reveals how women are profoundly affected by the legal struggles surrounding immigration. As issues of asylum, international law and human rights collide with FGM and its devastating health consequences, filmmakers Barbara Attie and Janet Goldwater travel between an FGM ceremony in a Malian village, where dozens of girls are involved, to the West African expatriate community of Philadelphia, where Mrs. Goundo challenges beliefs and battles the American legal system for her child's future.

The Heretics

A film by Joan Braderman
2009, 95 minutes, Color
DVD
Sale $295
Rental $90
Order No. L101005

"Ms. Braderman intercuts the story of the magazine and of second-wave feminism with recent interviews with the women. Thirty-odd years later, they're just as passionate and engaged. It's a pleasure to spend time in their company."

Rachel Saltz
The New York Times

"Skillfully crafted... invigorates feminism, art, and politics. Captures a fertile and effervescent past that is a model for young activist-artists of today. A compelling powerhouse example of feminism's creative force."

Ariel Dougherty
On the Issues

"Upbeat and affirmative... The stories these women tell envision a radically different moment in art-world history, one in which questions of career and market are barely mentioned, and philosophical arguments are firmly grounded in street-level politics."

Ed Halter
ARTFORUM

Tracing the influence of the Women's Movement's Second Wave on art and life, The Heretics is the exhilarating inside story of the New York feminist art collective that produced "Heresies: A Feminist Publication on Art and Politics" (1977-92). In this feature-length documentary, cutting-edge video artist/writer/director Joan Braderman, who joined the group in 1971 as an aspiring filmmaker, charts the collective's challenges to terms of gender and power and its history as a microcosm of the period's broader transformations.

On the road with her camera crew from New Mexico to Italy, Braderman reconnects with 28 other group members, including writer/critic Lucy Lippard, architect Susanna Torre, filmmaker Su Friedrich, and artists Ida Applebroog, Mary Miss, Miriam Schapiro, and Cecilia Vicuña. Still funny, smart and sexy, the geographically dispersed participants revisit how and why they came together and the extraordinary times they shared—supporting and exploring women's art and demanding the right to be heard.

Enlivened by striking digital motion graphics, The Heretics intercuts interviews with archival film clips, video and stills from the period, texts and images from "Heresies" magazines, and footage of completed artworks and works-in-progress. An exuberant, multi-layered collage, the film brings the Heresies collective—and its strategies for unlocking the potential in women's lives—vividly to the screen.

"The female MCs in this film tell us that they have always been there and are an integral part of hip hop. [They] continue to tell their occluded stories from mainstream hip hop histories and their triumphs over very real obstacles of race, gender and class."
Nicole Hodges Persley, Ph.D.
Asst. Professor of Theatre, University of Kansas

"Say My Name is a call for recalibration of the control masculine rhetoric has within and around hip hop... [and] a desperately needed call and response to reclaim a female space for hip hop."
Adam Hartzell
Hell on Frisco Bay

"Relevant and important in the continuing and evolving discourse on hip hop in American culture... The young women are the vanguard for the next generation of artists not afraid to say things that others may be thinking."
Michael Dinwiddie
Assoc. Professor, Gallatin School of Individualized Study, New York University

In a hip hop and R'n'B world dominated by men and noted for misogyny, the unstoppable female lyricists of Say My Name speak candidly about class, race, and gender in pursuing their passions as female MCs. This worldwide documentary takes viewers on a vibrant tour of urban culture and musical movement, from hip hop's birthplace in the Bronx, to grime on London's Eastside, to Philly, Detroit, Chicago, Atlanta, and L.A., and points in between.

Featuring interviews and musical performances from a diverse cast of women that includes Remy Ma, Rah Digga, Jean Grae, Erykah Badu, Estelle, as well as newcomers Chocolate Thai, Invincible and Miz Korona, this powerful documentary delves into the amazing personal stories of women balancing professional dreams with the stark realities of poor urban communities, race, sexism, and motherhood. The more than 18 artists featured in Say My Name battle for a place in a society that creates few chances for women. From emerging artists filled with new creativity, to true pioneers like MC Lyte, Roxanne Shante, and Monie Love, these are women turning adversity into art.

"An outstanding film that documents an amazing life. Mink was a trailblazer known today for her incredible commitment to the ideals of democracy. This film is ideal for courses on Women & Politics and Racial & Ethnic Politics."

Stefanie Chambers
Assoc. Professor of Political Science, Trinity College

"Moving and inspirational... It does a terrific job of bringing to light a time in US social and political history which feels both distant and all-too-familiar."

Martha Ackelsberg
Dept. of Government & Program for the Study of Women and Gender, Smith College

In 1965, Patsy Takemoto Mink became the first woman of color in the United States Congress. Seven years later, she ran for the US presidency and was the driving force behind Title IX, the landmark legislation that transformed women's opportunities in higher education and athletics.

Mink was an Asian American woman who fought racism and sexism while redefining US politics. Her tumultuous, often lonely political journey reveals what can be at stake for female politicians that defy expectations, push limits and adhere to their principles. Mink encountered sexism within her own party, whose leaders disliked her independent style and openly maneuvered against her. And her liberal views, particularly her vocal opposition to the Vietnam War, engendered intense criticism.

A compelling portrait of an iconoclastic figure that remains seldom spotlighted in history books, this film illuminates how Mink's daring to remain "ahead of the majority" in her beliefs enabled groundbreaking changes for the rights of the disenfranchised. A woman of the people as well as a pioneer, a patriot and an outcast, Patsy Mink's intriguing story embodies the history, ideals and spirit of America.

The Christian Science Monitor

Recalling a watershed event in US politics, this compelling documentary takes an in-depth look at the 1972 presidential campaign of Shirley Chisholm, the first black woman elected to Congress and the first to seek nomination for the highest office in the land.

Following Chisholm from her own announcement of her candidacy through her historic speech in Miami at the Democratic National Convention, the story is a fight for inclusion. Shunned by the political establishment and the media, this longtime champion of marginalized Americans asked for support from people of color, women, gays, and young people newly empowered to vote at the age of 18. Chisholm's bid for an equal place on the presidential dais generated strong, even racist opposition. Yet her challenge to the status quo and her message about exercising the right to vote struck many as progressive and positive. Period footage and music, interviews with supporters, opponents, observers, and Chisholm's own commentary all illuminate her groundbreaking initiative, as well as political and social currents still very much alive today.

A CRUSHING LOVE Chicanas, Motherhood and Activism

A film by Sylvia Morales
2009, 58 minutes, Color
DVD
Sale $295
Rental $90
Order No. L10977

"Morales comes full circle to an unprecedented chronicle of the rich history of US Latina women's leadership, strength and struggle in the workplace, the family, community, society, the world."
John Ramirez, Ph.D.
Professor of Television, Film & Media Studies, California State University, Los Angeles

"With honesty and insight, ... this documentary is perhaps the first to put the 'personal' back into the history of the Chicano civil rights movement."
Chon A. Noriega
Dir., UCLA Chicano Studies Research Center

"A critical document on maternity and its challenges, about the crushing force of love for one's family and community."
Kathleen McHugh
Professor & Dir., UCLA Center for the Study of Women

A Crushing Love, Sylvia Morales' sequel to her groundbreaking history of Chicana women, Chicana (1979), honors the achievements of five activist Latinas—labor organizer/farm worker leader Dolores Huerta, author/educator Elizabeth "Betita" Martinez, writer/playwright/educator Cherrie Moraga, civil rights advocate Alicia Escalante, and historian/writer Martha Cotera—and considers how these single mothers managed to be parents and effect broad-based social change at the same time.

Questions about reconciling competing demands are ones that highly acclaimed filmmaker Sylvia Morales, a working mother of two herself, pondered aloud as she prepared this documentary. Historical footage and recent interviews with each woman reveal their contributions to key struggles for Latino empowerment and other major movements of our time. Both they and their grown children thoughtfully explore the challenges, adaptations, rewards, and missteps involved in juggling dual roles. Scenes of Morales at work and at home, often humorously overlaid with her teenage daughter's commentary, bring the dilemma up to date. Chicana continues to be used in classrooms more than thirty years after it was made; A Crushing Love is a memorable sequel which offers us indelible portraits of unforgettable women, including one of Morales herself.

Antonia Pantoja: ¡Presente!

"A valuable contribution to our understanding of social movements of the sixties, the Civil Rights Movement in New York, and Latino education."
Sonia Lee
Asst. Professor,
Dept. of History, Washington University in St. Louis

Antonia Pantoja (1922-2002), visionary Puerto Rican educator, activist, and early proponent of bilingual education, inspired multiple generations of young people and fought for many of the rights that people take for granted today. Unbowed by obstacles she encountered as a black, Puerto Rican woman, she founded ASPIRA to empower Puerto Rican youth, and created other enduring leadership and advocacy organizations in New York and California, across the United States, and in Puerto Rico. Recognized for her achievements in 1996, Dr. Pantoja was awarded the prestigious Presidential Medal of Freedom, the highest honor bestowed upon civilians in the US.

In this important documentary, Pantoja's compelling story is told through never-before-seen home movies, archival footage, and personal passionate testimony from Pantoja herself and some of her countless protégés, as well as her life partner. Highlighting major landmarks in Pantoja's biography and long, productive career, the film shows her profound commitment to transforming society, her pivotal role in the Puerto Rican community's fight to combat racism and discrimination, and her pioneering work in securing a bilingual voice in the US. An eloquent tribute to a remarkable woman, the film sheds new light on the Puerto Rican community's far-reaching triumphs.

Jane Bishop '51
Assoc. Professor of Political Science,
Wellesley College

Past and present collide in this extraordinarily well crafted documentary when filmmaker Natalia Almada (All Water Has a Perfect Memory), winner of the Sundance Film Festival's US Directing Award for documentary, brings to life audio recordings she inherited from her grandmother. These recordings feature Alicia Calles' reminiscences about her own father—Natalia's great-grandfather—General Plutarco Elias Calles, a revolutionary general who became president of Mexico in 1924. In his time, Calles was called "El Bolshevique" and "El Jefe Máximo", or "the foremost chief". Today, he remains one of Mexico's most controversial figures, illustrating both the idealism and injustices of the country's history.

Through Alicia's voice, this visually stunning, stylistically innovative film moves between the conflicting memories of a daughter grappling with her remembrances of her father and his violent public legacy. It draws exceptional strength from meticulously edited audio, haunting photographs, archival newsreels, and old Hollywood films, combined with an original evocative soundtrack, sweeping footage of modern-day Mexico City, and interviews with today's working poor. El General is a poetic and cinematic exploration of historical judgment, and a complex, arresting portrait of a family and country living under the shadows of the past.

For Spaniards—and for the world—nothing has expressed their country's traditionally rigid gender roles more powerfully than the image of the male matador. So sacred was the bullfighter's masculinity to Spanish identity that a 1908 law barred women from the sport.

Visually stunning and beautifully crafted, Ella Es El Matador (She is the Matador) reveals the surprising history of the women who made such a law necessary, and offers fascinating profiles of two female matadors currently in the arena, the acclaimed Maripaz Vega and neophyte Eva Florencia. These women are gender pioneers by necessity, confronting both bull and social code. But what emerges through this mesmerizing film is their truest motivation—a sheer passion for bullfighting, in the pursuit of a dream.

Alternatives to Violence

From behind prison walls, a group of extraordinary women are shattering misconceptions of domestic violence. An important film that profiles Convicted Women Against Abuse (CWAA), the US prison system's first inmate initiated group and led by women, Sin by Silence is an essential resource featuring more than two hours of bonus materials, including interviews with experts on abusive relationships, law enforcement leaders and leaders in faith-based communities about domestic violence, and more.

Created by Brenda Clubine in 1989, CWAA has changed laws for battered women, raised awareness for those on the outside, and educated a system that does not fully comprehend the complexities of domestic abuse. Like many CWAA members, Brenda's years of inflicted abuse were never fully revealed. But because of CWAA's work and advocacy, new laws were enacted that now allow incarcerated survivors to challenge their original conviction. With unprecedented access inside the California Institution for Women, this emotionally packed documentary tells the stories of courageous women who have learned from their past, are changing their future, and teaching us how domestic violence affects each and every person.

Anna Bardone-Cone, Ph.D.
Assoc. Professor of Psychology, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

Sarah, a French college student runs a "pro-Ana" blog, part of a global online community of young women sharing tips on living with anorexia. Valerie Boyer is a passionate French National Assembly legislator proposing a groundbreaking bill to ban these online forums, issuing hefty fines and two-year prison sentences to their members. Eye-opening and extremely timely, Arresting Ana is the first film on a burgeoning movement promoting self-starvation.

Pro-Ana websites are in countries around the world, but France is the first to suggest regulating them. Combining in-depth interviews of medical and academic experts with video diaries by Sarah—for whom "Ana," short for anorexia, is a support system, friend, and motivation to stay alive—Arresting Ana offers unprecedented access into anorexia's hidden underground while seeking effective solutions to ending this serious disease.

This well-made documentary, which features an engrossing soundtrack and pro-Ana sites' shocking quotes and images, is crucial for students and teachers of media studies. It also provides important insight for psychologists, social workers, sociologists, and educators on who controls women's body issues, how young people interpret eating disorders today, and how legal and free-speech issues are contested in a new media landscape.

"Remind[s] others loudly that a true cover girl is one who is full of strength, power, confidence and compassion, not a vapid, thinned out display model used to sell self loathing to the masses."

"Good Girls Don't Get Fat"

Being thin, pretty and sexy brings happiness. Young girls receive these messages daily hundreds of times. But who sets these impossible beauty standards—and how can they be changed? In this eye-opening documentary, filmmaker and former Elite International fashion model Nicole Clark, now a champion for young girls and their self-esteem, calls for a necessary change: integrity and responsible media for our youth.

Cover Girl Culture pairs images of girls and women in television and print ads with footage from the catwalks and celebrity media. Clark is given rare access to women editors from major magazines like "Teen Vogue" and "ELLE", who provide a shocking defense of the fashion and advertising worlds. The film juxtaposes these interviews with revealing insights from models, parents, teachers, psychologists, body image experts and most importantly, the heartfelt expressions of girls themselves on how they feel about the media that surrounds them.

With an insider's view, the film addresses issues like today's increasingly invasive media, heightened advertising to tweens, the sexualization of girls, and consumer culture's disempowerment of young women. An up-to-date inquiry into advertising and the cult of celebrity's deep and negative impact on teens and young women, Cover Girl Culture also suggests how to educate young women to think critically about the media.

"Gives a human face to the alarming statistics that researchers are accumulating on the high incidence of sexual harassment, cyberbullying, and sexual pressures that are a fact of life for many teenagers."

Dr. Jennifer Connolly
Professor of Psychology,
York University

"A powerful film told through the voices of teens who sound the alarm on the influence of the Internet, media and pop culture in their hyper-sexualized social world."

Bullying.org

"A brutally honest look at the world of the modern teenager, in which boys have come to believe that sexual harassment is just harmless fun, and girls have been sold a sexual image of themselves that is one step away from serfdom."

Tribune Media

"Alarmingly raw and candid... Exposes such a disturbing underworld of teen life."

*Entertainment
Tonight Canada*

An inside look at the culture of sexual harassment and bullying widespread among many teens today, this unique and compelling program examines the price that adolescents, especially girls, pay to be cool, hip and popular in our brave new wired world. Questioning and confronting their own and each other's stereotypes and assumptions, three different groups of culturally diverse teenagers share personal stories of navigating their hyper-sexualized, high-tech environment, where the online posting of racy photos, raunchy videos, and explicit gossip and lies, is as commonplace as bombardment by provocative media messages that degrade and objectify women.

In its unflinching exposé, the film takes us on a journey that includes candid personal interviews and diary excerpts, images from computer screens and youth nightclubs, and clips from short fictional films that the three group's members have made about sexual and social pressures on their lives. Told through the authentic voices of teens, this essential tool for promoting awareness and change is must-see viewing for school and youth groups, media studies and women's studies educators, counselors, parents, and health care professionals.

The Middle of Everywhere The Abortion Debate from America's Heartland

"Essential to learn[ing] more about the multiple layers of the abortion debate in the US...this film challenges multiple stereotypes by revealing not that they are false, but rather that they are all too real and much more complicated than we typically acknowledge."

Jeannie Ludlow, Ph.D.
Asst. Professor,

"Captures the essence of middle America and its ambivalence on the controversy of abortion and abortion politics... Themes of freedom, independence, and fundamentalism around the issue of abortion are explored and exposed with an objective eye."

Women's Center Dir.,

South Dakota is America's heartland—waving cornfields, hard-working farmers, family values and a population of 750,000, the majority of whom identify as conservative and anti-abortion. Native daughter Rebecca Lee returns home in 2006 on the brink of a historic state vote: House Bill 1215 could make South Dakota the first state to outlaw most abortions since Roe vs. Wade passed almost 30 years earlier. In The Middle of Everywhere, Lee discovers the debate to be complex, with both sides claiming compassion for women and the same desire to stop the need for abortion.

When 1215 fails to pass, Lee sets out to uncover what would make a self-proclaimed pro-life state vote against the very measure that would end most legal abortions. South Dakotans appear conflicted in their beliefs: passing the Pharmacist Refusal Law, allowing pharmacists and doctors the right not to dispense birth control if doing so goes against their religious views, yet voting along pro-choice lines to keep abortion safe and legal. Was the vote a simple misunderstanding of what it means to be pro-choice? Was it a deeply-held resentment against government intrusion into people's private lives? Whatever the final reason, The Middle of Everywhere reveals that the issue goes beyond the simple choices of being for or against abortion to the much deeper question of what values we hold dear as Americans and as humans beings.

Latching On The Politics of Breastfeeding in America

A film by Katja Esson
2010, 36 minutes, Color
DVD
Sale $250
Rental $75
Order No. L10999

"With historical perspective, this film provides a comprehensive look at the multiple contemporary issues surrounding breastfeeding in the US. Can be used to spark discussion in medical anthropology, medical history, public health, and women's studies."

Aimee Eden
Dept. of Anthropology,
University of South Florida

"The message is not that breastfeeding is inherently difficult for the vast majority of women; rather, it is the unsupportive way in which our culture approaches breastfeeding that makes this very natural process profoundly challenging for so many mothers."

Dr. Jerry Calnen, M.D.
President, Academy of Breastfeeding Medicine

"Confronts the complexities [and] shine[s] light on the importance of breastfeeding and the significant need for education and support to help moms and babies connect from the start."
Elaine Barrington, L.C.S.W.
Founder,
The Natural Parenting Way

After filmmaker Katja Esson's sister gave birth in Germany, she was able to breastfeed her baby anywhere and at any time. Returning home to New York, Esson found that breastfeeding was rarely practiced and largely unseen. Academy Award® Nominee Esson (Ferry Tales) turned her quirky eye on the subject and set out to learn why this was so. Her wide-ranging, frequently funny documentary highlights the intersecting economic, social, and cultural forces that have helped replace mother's milk with formula produced by a billion dollar industry, and reveals the challenges and rewards for women who buck the trend.

Latching On draws on lively first-hand accounts from mothers of diverse ethnicities and economic backgrounds, as well as candid observations by pediatricians, healthcare providers, lactation specialists, and the proprietor of New York's first breastfeeding boutique. Including data about paid maternity leave, hospital post-delivery policies, and workplace accommodations for nursing mothers, the film compares current US practices with standards adopted elsewhere. Tensions around public breastfeeding and "breast is best" promotion campaigns highlight society's perceived interest in regulating women's reproductive behavior, as well as the power of culture to assign sexual and moral meaning to mothers' bodies. Entertaining and insightful, Latching On is an important analysis of the politics of breastfeeding, illuminating the complexities behind a simple, natural act.

Chandra Menard
www.blogto.com

This eye-opening, often amusing documentary by the director of Tiger Spirit, winner of Canada's prestigious Donald Brittain Gemini Award, records the filmmaker's quest for safe, sane and affordable ways to raise her child in a world embedded with toxic threats and still lead a normal life. Although new mother Min Sook Lee breast fed her daughter from birth, she used baby bottles too, only to discover that they leached a chemical byproduct linked to impaired health and serious diseases. This set in motion a journey that exposes hidden dangers in infant bath soaps, diaper rash creams, teething toys and many everyday products from an industry largely unregulated by law. For Lee, it also uncovers risks posed by our own homes and chemical contaminants we carry within our own bodies.

Her search introduces us to others, including nursing mothers and parents helping to build youngsters' natural immune systems, who are seeking alternative choices themselves and finding healthier, environment-friendly ways to rear their children. A personal essay that packs a punch, My Toxic Baby throws a spotlight on non-hazardous options that are available in our chemically saturated world, and further emphasizes women's particular concerns about environmental hazards and health.

"Exceptional. The great strength of the documentary is that children, dissenting scientists, women, and Native American groups are given a voice."
Sophie M. Lavoie
Feminist Review

When Canadian filmmaker Barri Cohen discovers that her ten-year-old daughter's blood carries carcinogens like benzene and the long-banned DDT, she travels to toxic hotspots to uncover startling clusters of deadly diseases. Juxtaposing interviews with affected families and experts with startling facts and footage, this film offers evidence that industrialized countries are conducting large-scale toxicological experiments on their children.

In the southern Ontario cities of Windsor and Sarnia, everyone seems to know children who have suffered from respiratory illnesses, leukemia, and brain tumors. And the Native Canadian reserve of Aamjiwnaang, ringed by Sarnia's "Chemical Valley", has an astounding birth rate problem that officials can't afford to ignore.

As childhood cancer rates skyrocket, Cohen meets dedicated activists working for change and doctors and scientists connecting the dots between environmental pollution and illness. She also learns how fast barriers can go up when posing questions to federal authorities about toxins and health—and how much information the government obscures from its citizens about public health. Empowering and moving, Toxic Trespass is one woman's quest for truth and essential viewing for anyone concerned about pollutants' growing effects on our and our children's lives.

"Mukhtaran Mai is an inspiration to all who hope for a better life and expanded educational opportunities for women of the developing world."

Gail Minault
Professor of History,
University of Texas, Austin

In 2002, Mukhtaran Mai, a rural Pakistani woman from a remote part of the Punjab, was gang-raped by order of her tribal council as punishment for her younger brother's alleged relationship with a woman from another clan. Instead of committing suicide or living in shame, Mukhtaran spoke out, fighting for justice in the Pakistani courts—making world headlines. Further defying custom, she started two schools for girls in her village and a crisis center for abused women. Mukhtaran, who had never learned to read but knew the Koran by heart, realized that only a change in mentality could break brutal, archaic traditions and social codes. Her story, included in the bestseller "Half the Sky" by Nicholas D. Kristof and Sheryl WuDunn, and the subject of Mukhtaran's own memoir, "In the Name of Honor", has inspired women across the globe.

Revealing the progress and fruits of Mukhtaran's labor, this powerful documentary tracks the school's profound impact on the girls and families of Meerwala and shows how the crisis center empowers women seeking its help. An important look inside Pakistan, where the impact of Islamic fundamentalism is revealed and how women are fighting its oppressive and violent impact.

Miss Gulag is a rare look at the lives of the first generation of women to come of age in post-Soviet Russia, where women's unemployment and incarceration rates are very high. Shot inside a Siberian prison camp and the surrounding countryside, this absorbing documentary traces the individual paths of three young women now at different points in their lives: Tatiana, whose parole hearing and early release are captured on film; Natasha, living in freedom with her family in a remote village; and Yulia, not yet twenty and facing still more prison time. Like their individual circumstances, the shared experience of long jail sentences has made them vigilant about their own destinies. Incarceration and an environment of constant surveillance are harsh, but no less so than life outside. Yet all three women, their families, and loved ones are sustained by hope.

Discovering an Internet item about an annual beauty pageant staged by women inmates of UF91-9, director Maria Yatskova (born in Moscow and living in the US since the age of five) was inspired to make Miss Gulag. The film's compelling, moving stories of survival shed light on democracy's darker side and offer a look at the issues facing women in post Soviet Russia.

In this revealing documentary five extraordinary women talk about their occupations, aspirations, and the rights and status of women in their Muslim countries. Bosnian Alma Suljevic risks her life daily clearing the landmines near Sarajevo that are war's deadly legacy, then sells minefield earth in European art galleries so that she can continue her work. Eren Keskin, a longtime human rights activist and lawyer with music conservatory training, fights to change Turkey's legal practices that perpetuate violence against women. Veteran filmmaker Rakshan Bani-Ehmad, true to her credo that art must "look, observe, and discover", frequently pushes Iran's censorship rules to the limit. Surrounded by conflict since childhood, young Afghani writer Moshagan Saadat creates brave, profoundly moving and memorable poems. And renowned Pakistani dancer Nahid Siddiqui, once forced to live outside her homeland when her work was banned, continues to perfect, renew, and teach her art form. Captured by Spanish filmmaker Alba Sotorra, who hitchhiked from Barcelona to Pakistan to shoot Unveiled Views, these self-portraits of hope, heroism, and pride challenge conventional Western stereotypes about women in the Islamic world.

"Dispels any notion that nuns just blindly accept and follow the dictates of the Roman Catholic Church. Alvin gives us an insider's view of their lives, their opinions, their approach to religion and faith."

Tim Miller
The Cape Cod Times

This absorbing documentary examines women's decisions to lead religious lives in the Roman Catholic tradition in the post-feminist era. Throughout history, nuns were given certain advantages over other women, while still oppressed within their vocational pursuits. They were taught to read and write, encouraged to pursue music, literature, art, philosophy and spirituality, and officially allowed to escape marriage's powerless role of wife. But why would a woman choose a nun's life today?

Individual interviews with seven women provide answers—and explore how rebellion can happen within and outside the Church, how women in the Church reconcile conflicting, religious, personal, and political beliefs, and how they view official Church positions on contraception, homosexuality, and women's ordination as priests. The diverse group includes Poor Clares, contemplative nuns who spend most of their days in prayer, Maryknolls who have served in Central America, and a Roman Catholic Womanpriest. Both timely and insightful, the film provides a rare look at their experiences and current controversies over tradition, change and power within the Catholic Church.

Daniel Czitrom
Professor of History, Mount Holyoke College

In the forefront of early twentieth-century American literature about immigrant women's lives, Anzia Yezierska's work includes short fiction, novels, and essays, and her output spans 50 years. Sweatshop Cinderella, by award-winning filmmaker/historian Suzanne Wasserman, vividly depicts this Jewish immigrant writer's amazing story.

Arriving from Poland around 1890, Yezierska's family settled on the Lower East Side, where she toiled in sweatshops and laundries, studying English at night. Defying her parents, she pursued her education and became a teacher. Twice married and divorced, she also had a daughter. At the urging of philosopher John Dewey, with whom she fell in and out of love, Yezierska devoted herself full-time to writing stories and novels in Yiddish-English dialect that won awards and rave reviews. Soon Hollywood, which turned two of her works into movies, beckoned her to write screenplays. When disenchantment with that world set in, she returned to New York, writing and publishing her best work between 1922 and 1950.

Using archival stills and footage, silent film excerpts, letters, newspaper clippings, and interviews, this is a major contribution to our understanding and appreciation of Yezierska and her work.

Tea & Justice chronicles the experiences of three women who joined the New York Police Department during the 1980s—the first Asian women to become members of a force that was largely white and predominantly male. In this award-winning documentary, Officer Trish Ormsby and Detectives Agnes Chan and Christine Leung share their fascinating stories about careers and personal lives, as well as satisfactions and risks on the job, the stereotypes they defied, and how they persevered.

Intrigued by the image of Asian women in a non-traditional profession, filmmaker Ermena Vinluan explores her own mixed feelings about cops while honoring the challenges Ormsby, Chan and Leung embraced, and the far-reaching changes they helped bring about. Interviews with ordinary New Yorkers, leading advocates of law enforcement reform, and anti-police abuse activists consider proposed changes in police culture and explain how women's preventive policing style, based on communication, contrasts with more reactive, physically forceful methods used by men. Humorous cartoons, lively graphics depicting cultural icons of strong Asian women, and original music enhance this nuanced study of race, gender, and power.

We Want Roses Too (Vogliamo Anche Le Rose)

This stunning visual masterpiece is an exuberant testament to the resolve of women of the '60s and '70s sexual revolution and feminist movement in Italy. Acclaimed director Alina Marazzi takes viewers on a gorgeous storytelling journey through archival footage, advertisements, and colorful images juxtaposed with the true-life struggles and first person narrations creating a kaleidoscopic, funny and absorbing story of sexual liberation and revolutionary struggle.

Who's Afraid of Kathy Acker?

A multi-layered work featuring animation, archival footage and interviews with the likes of William Burroughs, Carolee Schneemann and Richard Hell, this film is a thoughtful and creative biography/essay on the late outlaw writer and punk icon, Kathy Acker. Acker's formally inventive novels, published from the '70s through the mid-'90s, appropriated texts from Great White Male writers and challenged assumptions about gender roles, sexuality, and the literary canon.

Tillie Olsen: A Heart in Action

An inspiring homage to Tillie Lerner Olsen—renegade, revolutionary, distinguished writer, feminist, humanist, labor organizer, and social activist. Class conscious and deeply joined to the world, Olsen countered the very core of American writing by immortalizing the lives of working class women and single mothers. Interviews with Olsen during the last years of her life interspersed with commentary from notable feminists such as Gloria Steinem and Alice Walker.

Suffragettes in the Silent Cinema

In the days before movies could talk, silent films spoke clearly of sexual politics. This rare and wonderful assemblage of silent era footage opens a historic window on how filmmakers on both sides of the women's suffrage issue used the exciting new medium to create powerful propaganda and images about women. This film raises key issues about the struggle for gender equality and the portrayal of women in the media, which remains as fascinating, engaging, and relevant today as yesterday.

Club Native

Acclaimed Mohawk director Tracey Deer follows the stories of Mohawk women who risked their Mohawk status, family, and community by following their hearts. Deeply impacted by racism and prejudice rooted in Canada's highly discriminatory 1876 Indian Act, and exacerbated by lingering preconceptions about blood quantum, Deer raises critical questions about belonging and identity, and the unjust patriarchal laws that disenfranchise Native women.

To See If I'm Smiling

In this award-winning documentary, the frank testimonials of six female Israeli soldiers stationed in Gaza and the West Bank pack a powerful emotional punch. The young women revisit their tours of duty with surprising honesty and strips bare the stereotypes of gender differences in the military. With archival footage, personal material, and compelling testimonies, the documentary explores the ways that gender, ethics, and moral responsibility intersect during wartime.

My Home - Your War

This film is an exceptional look at the effect of the Iraq war through the eyes of an ordinary Iraqi woman. Shot in Baghdad over three years before, during, and after the invasion of Iraq, this film tells the story of Layla Hassan and her family with vibrant scenes of Baghdad, and footage shot by Layla herself. The film vividly portrays how the War has created a situation where the rise of fundamentalism is putting women's rights increasingly at risk.

My Israel - Revisiting the Trilogy

Few filmmakers have probed issues of Israeli nationalism and Israeli-Palestinian relations more completely or intimately than Tel Aviv-born Yulie Cohen. In My Israel—Revisiting the Trilogy, Cohen revisits her acclaimed earlier films My Terrorist, My Land Zion, and My Brother with new footage, fresh perspective, and her trademark fearlessness. Set against the last turbulent decade of Israeli history, this film successfully combines Cohen's 10-year oeuvre in an incisive and refreshing new way.

In Sickness and In Health

Tender and bittersweet, this film puts a human face on the debate surrounding rights and equality for all Americans. Gay rights activists and longtime partners Marilyn Maneely and Diane Marini battle to legalize same-sex marriage, turning into a race against time following Marilyn's diagnosis of a terminal disease. Capturing a partner's heartbreak and the coming together of a community, the film outlines in real terms why marriage rights are critical to any individual's right to care for loved ones.
